ABOUT NONPROFITS ARE MESSY

Nonprofits Are Messy is an interview-style leadership podcast that answers the most pressing questions faced by nonprofit leaders around the world. We do that by finding people, whether in the nonprofit or corporate world, who are uniquely suited to answer these questions. Our guests run the gamut from five star business authors (Jim Collins) to sector leaders (CEO, Walton Family Foundation) to thought leaders (Adam Grant), to my wife ("Confessions of a Terrible Board Member").

The majority of our listeners are the heroic leaders in our society who commit themselves to public service - executive directors, senior staff, heads of school, development professionals, board leaders, and many more who provide service to the nonprofit sector.

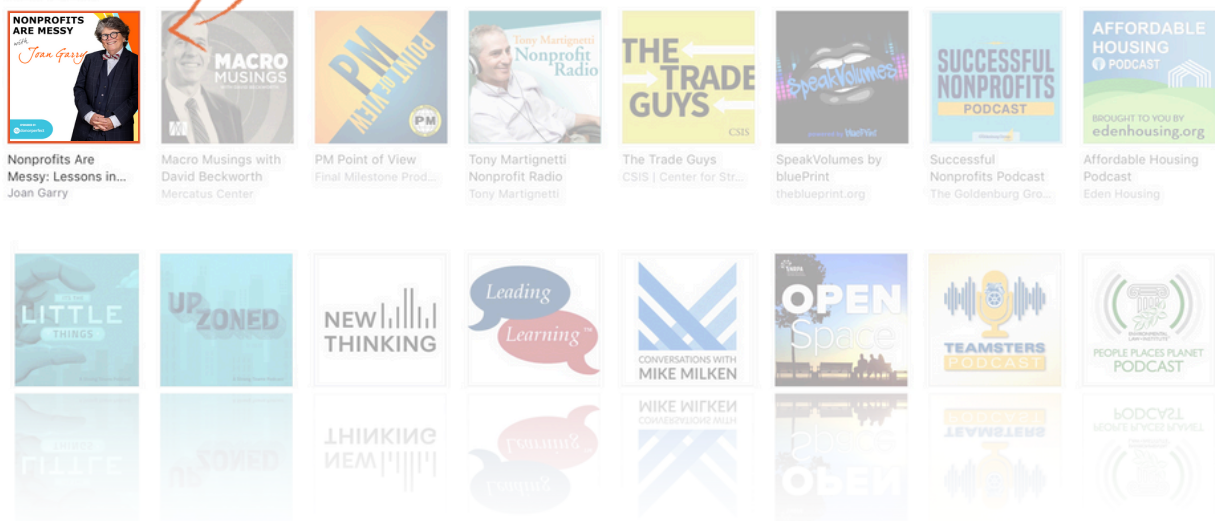

OUR GOAL IS SIMPLE.

We aim to find just the right expert to answer the questions on the minds of our listeners. And in so doing, we offer a conversational forum that will inform, entertain and inspire.

The podcast is typically listed in the top 10 in nonprofit category on Apple Podcast. Episodes of Nonprofits are Messy podcast are downloaded an average of 30,000 times per month and between 2016 to present have been downloaded by more than 2.8 million listeners across 207 different countries.

"No one should attempt to work at or lead a nonprofit (or maybe any company) without Joan! Always timely and relevant."

"I run a national nonprofit, large in reach and impact, but small on budget. I've been gobbling up resources and at times feel like I'm boiling an ocean as I click through the hyperlinks on google docs, looking for the answer on how to lead and do the right thing in a global pandemic! Joan kindly reminds the listener, that the answers are within us and are core to our leadership attributes, and coaches the listener on how to focus and pivot with great suggestions and resources. Thank you!"
